TWO VICTORIES FOR MISS ZINDERSTEIN

With Champion Defaulting, Boston Girl Becomes Favorite in Tennis Event.

MISS WAGNER IS WINNER

Indications of Intercity Match in Final Round at Heights

By SAMUEL J. BROOKMAN.

For the first time since the event be-an five years ago, Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory, national champion, will not be the winner of the annual invitation tennis tournament now in progress on the in-door courts of the Brooklyn Club. Heed-ing the advice of her physician, she de-faulted her second round match yester-day because of an infected toe, thereby leaving Miss Marion Zinderstein of Bosto second in national rank, the legical favorite in the tournament. Mrs. Mallory could have given a good account of herself despite the injury, but the effort undoubtedly would have aggravated the infection and would seriously have impaired her chances in the national indoor championship early next month.

With the titleholder out of the over With the titleholder out of the event, the most likely finalists are Miss Marie Wagner in the upper half and Miss Marion Zinderstein in the lower. The latter, having arrived a day late, played two matches yesterday, and won them both with plenty to spare. It took her the greater part of two sets, however, to reach anything like her true form, and in the meantime Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills gave her an interesting time in the meantime Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills gave her an interesting time of it. The Boston girl found it difficult to control her service and defaulted nine times during the match. In addition to that she volleyed out of court frequently. Profiting by the errors and getting everything back that was anywhere within reach, Miss Bayard held her own for six games of each set, the score being 2—3 in each case. Late in each division of play Miss Zinderstein managed to steady her strokes by taking fewer steady her strokes by taking fewer Jersey girl's service in the eighth me of each set decided it in her favor.

Grows More Effective.

It was a more efficient Miss Zinderstein who took the court later in the day in a second round match with Mrs. Percy Wilbourn. Her game had steadied remarkably by that time and she kept her strokes within bounds, despite the boldest sort of tactics. She was up at the net in most of the rallies, volleying beautifully, while from deep court her drives were crisp and precise. Although Mrs. Wilbourn played well defensively the best she could do was to win a single game out of thirteen contested. In the third round to-day Miss Zinderstein meets Miss Caroma Winn, and in the semi-final to-morrow the winner of to-day's match between Mrs. Rawson Wood and Mrs. De Forest Candee. In the other half of the draw Mrs. Samuel F. Warling plays Miss Helen Hooker and Miss Marie Wagner opposes Mrs. David C. Mills. The eight that survive are in the round before the semi-final.

smi-final.

Miss Wagner had to play only one match to get to the third round, for, after beating Mrs. Edward C. Duble, 6—1, 6—1, she won by default from Miss Bessle Holden. Miss Wagner showed her customary versatile attack and had Mrs. Duble running all over the court to meet her well placed strokes. Mrs. Rawson Wood was the splendid form in her second round match, in which she eliminated Mrs. S. W. Feiton of Boston. She played almost exclusively from the base line, driving deep into the corners and shaving the sidelines with aimost unerring judgment of distance and angles. Straight sets were the order of the y. The nearest approach to an extra t contest was the tussle between Mrs. o Forest Candee and Mrs. Bernard F. enz. in which the first set ran to the streentieth game. It was a tossup in the first set, but in the second Mrs. Stenz tired and lost effectiveness.

Doubts Match With Capablanca Will Begin Mar. 10.

Berly, Feb. 1.—The American State Department has not given Dr. Emanuel Lasker, the world's chess chambion, a vise for his preposed trip to New York and Cuba to meet Jose Capablanca, the Cuban choss master. Dr. Lasker's first application for permission to enter the United States was refused at Washington. The application set forth that his intention was "to visit chess clubs in the United States." It falled to specify that the primary purpose was to meet Capablanca in a championship match at Havanna.

Dr. Lasker informed the Associated Press that his trip was in abeyance, owing to the State Department's refusal to issue a vise for himself and his wife. He coubted that the match would begin on March 19, as the only opportunities to make the voyage that would suit him were afforded over lines touching at American ports.

Consul General Pierre Mail said such prompt response to his Majesty's announcement was unexpected and gratifying. He is having application blanks prepared.

No names will be announced until entries actually are received. Yachtsmen could come pretty close to guessing, however, which of the big schooners will be entered. picked were the Intrepid, the Elfay, the Undaunted and the Atlantic. They are all built for deep sea sailing and of more than 300 tons gross each.

Baron de Cartier de Marchienne, Belgian Ambassador, will come from Washington to-morrow and further annoucements as to the conditions of the contest are expected. Baron de Cartier also was gratified at the way King Albert's offer was received, his representative said.

It is unlikely the date, July 4, selected by the King for the start off Ambrose Channel light vessel, will be advanced. send abroad to compete in the British open championship, it behooves the clubs to consider this matter, so that the professionals will know exactly how to proceed in case they are called to join the big army of invasion. Some time ago the P. G. A. issued a preliminary list of thirty players from which it intends to make the final choice. It is planned to send as many as twenty players to St. Andrews if enough money can be raised but ten or a dozen will go in any event. The preliminary list of thirty should serve as a guide to the clubs, and every organization which has the name of its instructor included in that array should immediately take the question under consideration and so notify its professional whether or not it intends to give him the necessary leave of absence in the event of his being called to join the colors.

to absent himself for the length of time it will require to compete in the British open. When first the project was broached it was felt that whatever objections came would be from the players themselves, as the pros would then be asked to give up from a month to six weeks of their time at a very busy and lucrative period of their season.

Investigation proves, however, that enthusiasm for the proposed trip is rampant among the pros, especially the younger and less experienced in a tournament way. These feel that to be sent abroad to represent their country at the British open championship would be a very real honor, a badge of distinction in fact, which, even should they fall to qualify at St. Andrews, still would give them a certain prestige which their less fortunate fellows could not possibly enjoy.

Most clubs would rather have their Most clubs would rather have their professional around than away playing in a tournament. In this particular instance, however, it is somewhat different. Then it probably would mean something to the club, especially if the professional should happen to do well abroad. In any event it would be to the advantage of all concerned if at the earliest possible moment the club officials give this question their deep consideration. It was with the idea of keeping the clubs abreast of the times that the P. G. A. issued its list of possibilities.
